

I am outraged at the lack of control of the biased media using my public airwaves as they do. If the FCC cannot use its power to regulate Sinclair in their broadcast of Stolen Honor, then the consequences of this hate mongering will be the fault of the FCC. In this very important election year you could be holding the fate of our democracy in your hands. Please show that you are above the partisanship of this Bush administration. Sinclair is not a good bedfellow for the FCC.

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
